72 Very Important Reasons

Why you need to attend NCCJ's
Citation Award Dinner
Wednesday, Nov. 17

Seventy-two. That's how many high school students, graduates of the NCCJ ANYTOWN program, attended our anti-bullying workshop on October 27. Those students, supported by their ANYTOWN peers, plan to launch anti-bullying efforts in their own high schools. With the prevalence of social media and texting opening up new ways to harrass and intimidate people, the students know how critical this issue is to the health and safety of their peers. Thanks to programs made possible by NCCJ's supporters, they know they can do something about it.

Students perform during an NCCJ Citation Award Dinner. The 2010 dinner will be held Nov. 17 at Koury Convention Center.

We hope you are planning to join us next Wednesday, November 17, 6 p.m., to learn more about how NCCJ of the Piedmont Triad is working to fight bias, bigotry, and racism in our community.

With your support, we can keep the momentum building -- 72 teenagers is only the beginning.
